Dear Mr. Denton,

I wish to register a strong protest about your attempt to start up licensing procedures again, even before the deliberations of the Kereny committee are complete. Quite frankly, I was shocked.

How, in the face of all the uncertainty and ignorance about some of the basic questions AIREADY (e.g., permanent storage of wastes) could you have considered continuing with "business as usual", when here are questions still unanswered about what happened at 3-mile island!?!?

The arrogance of those of you holding the decision making power in these matters - which will effect all future generations (if there ARE any) - is mind-boggling.

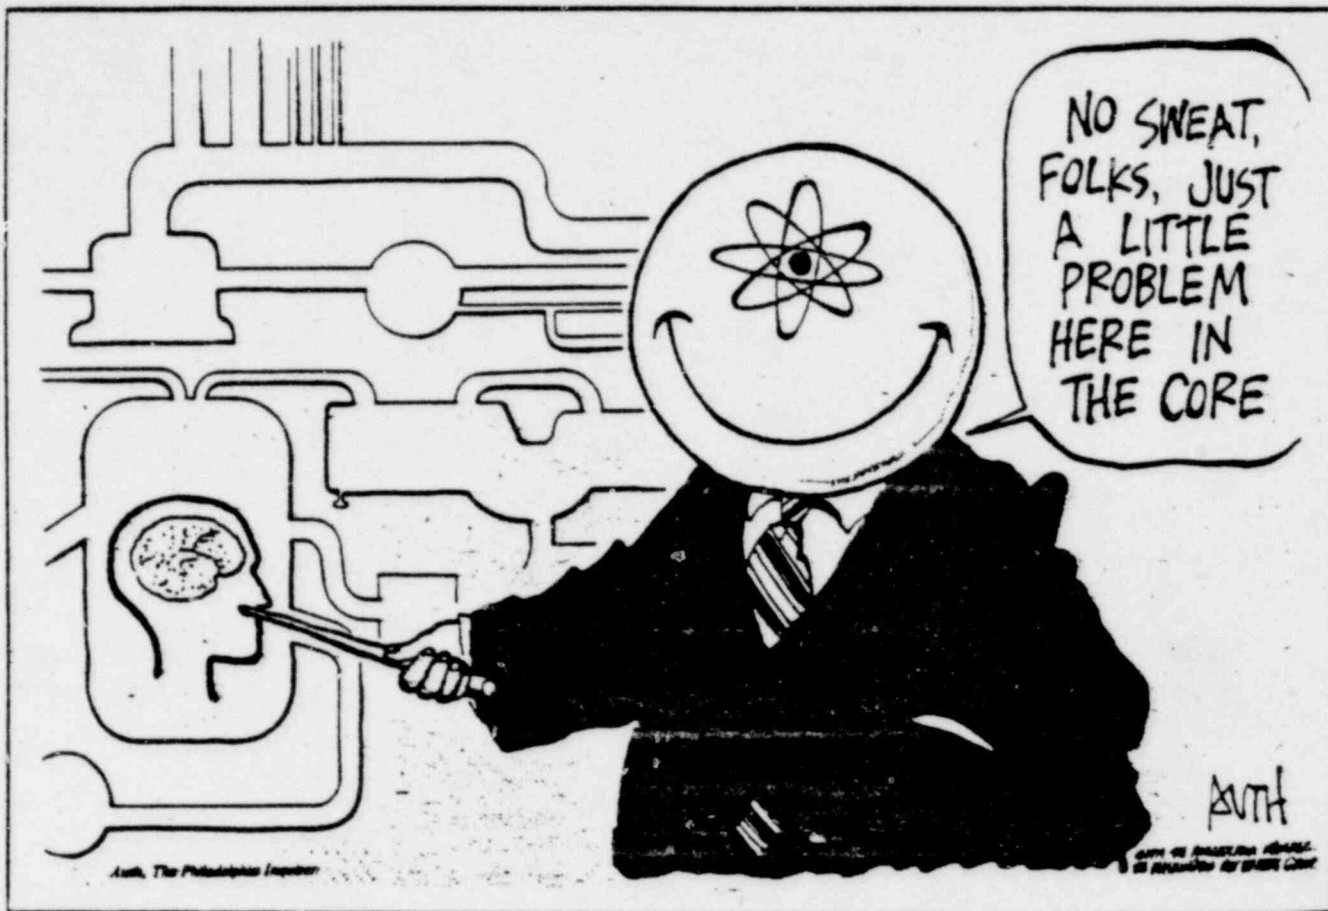

Sincerely,

Barry Childers, Ph.D.

"Everything unknown and empty is filled with psychological projection; it is as if the investigator's own psychic background were mirrored in the darkness."

Carl Jung

"Ignorance in English law is no excuse for breaches in the law. In the collective unconscious, ignorance, unawareness, is not only inexcusable but the greatest offence with the most dire consequences. That is why in Greek myth, legend, and art the villain is always the "not knowing", the non-recognition of man's own inner eventfulness, which is the real crime. Always it is man's unawareness that evokes the vengeance of fate, and man's lack of knowledge of himself that calls up disaster. How much greater, therefore, the culpability of a consciousness like our own that knows and will not face up to the responsibility of what it knows! For no one since Freud, and above all since Jung, can any longer plead ignorance of where our failure starts."

Laurens Van Der Post

"Whether the shadow becomes our friend or enemy depends largely upon ourselves. . . . In fact, he is exactly like any human being, with whom one has to get along, sometimes by giving in, sometimes by resisting, sometimes by giving love -- whatever the situation requires. The shadow becomes hostile only when he is ignored or misunderstood."

H. L. Von Franz
