Re. Paper Entitled "Investigation of Cracking
in SWAC Submerged Arc Welding" by J. W. York

NOTE TO AUTHORS: A new USA Copyright Law went into effect on January 1, 1978. The new law requires the American Welding Society to obtain a "Transfer of Copyright Ownership" from you before the Welding Journal can both publish your paper and service Author/Reader/Society needs as was the custom before January 1, 1978. If the paper was written as part of your job ("work for hire" is the legal phrase), then the "Transfer of Copyright Ownership" should come from your employer. PLEASE SIGN THIS FORM AND MAIL IT TO REACH THE WELDING JOURNAL BY PUBLICATION DATE.

TO THE AMERICAN WELDING SOCIETY--

1. "Transfer of Copyright Ownership" is hereby made to the American Welding Society with respect to the above paper in order to enable the American Welding Society to accomplish the following in addition to publishing the paper in the Welding Journal:
 - Prepare reprints as requested.
 - Utilize the paper or portions thereof as part of other literature prepared by AWS, provided credit is given.
 - Extend permission to researchers, etc., to use or refer to relevant portions of the paper in articles for other magazines or in books, provided appropriate credit is given.
 - Extend permission to reproduce, provided proper credit is given.
2. The author (and coauthors if any) and/or employer (in "work for hire" papers) retain all patent rights that may be implicit in the paper and retain additional rights as follows:
 - The right to use the article in total or in part in future published works, after publication, with credit to the American Welding Society/Welding Journal.
 - The right to present the paper orally without restriction.
 - The right to make reprints, with credit to Welding Journal.
