Dear Sir:

I want to know if the nuclear power plants are following the rules they should be. Referring to the one that blew up in Pennsylvania March 28th. This plant was plagued with troubles. But all they would do is close it until they thought they had it fixed. But something would just happen again. Are all plants having trouble like this or just the Pennsylvania plant?

Are the inspectors watching these plants close enough? Are these plants keeping their equipment updated? How about the waste that comes from these plants? Is there something better they can do with it instead of dumping it where it can be uncovered later?

Cordially
