

7-3-82

TO: NUCLEAR POWER REGULATORY COMMISSION
TO: OTHER INTERESTED PARTIES

The venting of Krypton gas from the Three-Mile Island Plant suggests a solution that I doubt anyone has thought of.

The vented gas should be released into large-volume high-altitude weather balloons mixed with a little helium for lift. This would pass the krypton up through the atmosphere safely into the stratosphere or higher depending on the balloon type used and fill capacity.

George A. Mayerchak

Interested person, researcher

8008270 019