Secretary,
U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission
Washington, DC 20555.
ATTN: Docketing and Services Branch

Dear Secretary,

The NRC together with the citizens of Cambridge, Ohio should hold Shieldalloy Metallurgical Corporation and all predecessor companies responsible for the entire clean-up operation according to their respective degree of liability. These companies should also pay for independent experts and scientists chosen by the citizens to help in making necessary decisions regarding safety, health and environmental issues.

Since Ohio is already a very polluted state, all contaminated and radioactive waste should be removed from the state to a licensed facility for disposal.

Interested citizens' groups and people such as Sherwood Sauman should oversee the clean-up. They should be given all the assistance they need in deciding if and when community standards are reached so that the land can be returned to the community for "unrestricted use". Any citizen involved in the process should have no affiliation with Shieldalloy, predecessor companies, or shareholders of these companies.

Sincerely Yours,

Jay Phillips
