Pete Garcia, Project Manager, URFO

Summary of Discussions: A meeting was held on July 12, 1990, in the URFO conference room to discuss point of compliance well locations at the Homestake Mill. Numerous telephone calls and letters had been written on the subject of the proper locations for point of compliance wells. Due to this, a meeting was scheduled to discuss siting options. Homestake contends that the active and inactive tailings impoundments, as well as the brine evaporation ponds, represent a disposal area and should have point of compliance wells established that monitor the combined effects of these disposal sites. Homestake was informed that NRC policy requires that point of compliance wells be established at the downgradient toe of the reclaimed outslope for each unit. Due to this,
