The Honorable William Goodling
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Goodling:

Not more than 80 feet from our home stands a T.M.I. warning siren.

We are really amazed that the blast from this siren does not break our windows. It is usually tested the first Monday of every month.

We have a six month old puppy who is out in the yard during the day. He goes crazy when this siren goes off. We are very afraid that this siren is going to permanently damage his ears. We put him inside on the dates that it is going off, but it is still too loud.

Now we are wondering, when we have children how will this siren affect them and their hearing?

Directly across the street is the Seventh Day Adventist Church and School. There are children there during the day. How does this affect them? This might be something that will not show up right away but very gradually.

This siren is proving more of a hazard than a help to us.

There were plenty of open fields on our road but they had to put it right in front of our home.

If that siren ever goes off for real, we probably won't have time to save ourselves because they will wait til the last possible minute to advise the public. I don't think we'll ever know the truth about what happened during the T.M.I. Alarm a few years back. It was bad enough that happened but now were being constantly reminded of T.M.I. with that siren.

If it ever goes off and my dog is outside loose and he gets hit, it will not easily be forgotten and I will not stand for it.

Can it be moved?

Awaiting your answer,
