Part 2.

The following two brief digressions are to validate my final conclusions. Banks and their executives creating a potential global economic disaster with derivatives involving mortgage securities were never prosecuted or punished, the financial sector reaping a huge windfall from the recession they themselves created while many of my neighbors lost their homes. Some leaders in this country have proposed the execution of drug dealers as a deterrent in the opioid crisis. Purdue Pharma, manufacturer of Oxycontin, while aware of increasing abuse of their product for well over a decade, were shielded from prosecution commensurate to their crimes, executives simply paying fines for charges reduced to misdemeanor. Kurt Vonnegut often wrote, and I quote, "So it goes."

The institutions of government may still retain power and authority but they have lost all credibility, betrayal of the 1995 agreement negotiated between the State of Idaho and the DOE simply another example of money and convenience taking priority over the environment and the law. Man, the only creature to gleefully poop toxic, radioactive excrement right where he and his neighbors eat and sleep, further sealing the unfortunate destiny of our planet and its children.

Idaho should immediately and forever refuse to allow any shipments of nuclear waste into the state, and insist the conditions stipulated in the 1995 agreement be honored.
