SUBJECT: BRUNSWICK 2 - CORE SPRAY PUMPS (OELD # 842 204)

Marshall, this is a good presentation of what the change is and why its no problem. You should not finish it up with a reliance on a questionable example. I would get rid of that questionable example. This is one of the rare cases in which I think you can simply add at that point something similar to -- for the foregoing reasons, the Staff propose to conclude that it involves no significant hazards given the three factors test from the rule. Its a good analysis and I would go from the description you gave to the three factor-findings.
