Al Cleback called me this morning and said he had had second thoughts about giving us a draft of the report by the U. S. Geological Survey prior to review by his superiors. He now feels that he will not be able to do so.

He is attempting to find out how long it will take the Interior Department to review the draft and will let us know when we can expect to receive the final report. His best "guesstimate" is that we won't get the report from Interior for about three weeks. This estimate is based on the assumption that the draft will be sent to the Department in about a week and that the Department review will take about two weeks. He suggested that either R. Levenstein or H. L. Price might request a copy of the draft from Interior.
