General Comment

I am in support of this rule. There is a need for communication when it comes to hazardous material, because if mishandled in tribal lands there needs to be notice that there was hazardous material there in the first place. States and the NRC are already getting advance notice, and this should be put in place for tribal regions too. This rule seems beneficial for all parties involved and the process would be similar to what is already being done for states and the NRC. Tribal governments want to be seen as well because they deserve the same respect as the states, and they should have that right to be notified if a potentially radioactive material is being shipped.
