It is totally appalling to me that it would even be considered to let radioactive materials to be used in consumer product lines. I realize that other countries are doing this, but it is a totally unacceptable practice. Squirming out from an expensive storage problem in this fashion represents thoughtless uncaring for the consequences of the health and well being of the greater population. This issue should be postponed for the hearing until September 2000. The quality of human life is much more valuable than the problems of nuclear storage. Please do not even go there.

Sincerely
Jeffery S. Green
