

Morgan Rafferty has been active with the San Luis Obispo Mothers for Peace for almost 9 years and has served on the board of directors for most of that time. She has been the project manager for cases before the California Public Utilities Commission related to Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant, worked with the California Energy Commission on issues related to nuclear power in California, and assisted the Mothers for Peace in their federal cases related to nuclear power plant security. She also serves as the Executive Director of the Environmental Center of San Luis Obispo County, a local membership organization that is devoted to the protection and enhancement of the natural resources of San Luis Obispo County through community based advocacy, action and education.