

Timothy Mossman

Tim Mossman joined the NRC in September of 2008. He spent the previous decade working software-intensive projects for Northrop Grumman. His major assignments included supporting the development of highly dependable command and control systems for the Ground-Based Mid-Course Defense and Kinetic Energy Interceptor programs. He has an undergraduate degree in nuclear engineering from the University of Virginia and a master's degree in reliability engineering from the University of Maryland.