I approve granting relief from the Commission's previous direction, as requested by the staff in this COMSECY. It is laudable that the standards working group formed by the American Nuclear Society has made such substantial progress on the development of the draft standard, rendering the previously directed activities (regarding the development of interim guidance) essentially unnecessary at this time.

I approve the staff's request in light of the current efforts to develop an American Nuclear Society standard. An Integrated Safety Analysis standard that addresses the diversity of fuel cycle facilities, includes human performance considerations, and uses a peer review process, is essential to provide regulatory stability and to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the fuel cycle program.
