Design Specific Review Standard for mPower Design Issued for Comment

During the week of May 6, 2013, the staff issued 154 sections of the mPower Design Specific Review Standard (DSRS) to the public via Agencywide Document Access and Management System (ADAMS) along with the mPower DSRS Scope and Safety Review Matrix (ADAMS Accession No. ML12305A348). The DSRS will provide staff guidance to perform the 10 CFR Part 52 reviews of the B&W mPower™ design. The Scope and Safety Review Matrix addresses the applicability of all Standard Review Plan sections for mPower. In some cases, the section will be used as-is for the review, some sections don't apply to the review because the structure, system or component may not exist in this design, some sections needed editing to address unique features of mPower or to incorporate lessons learned from previous reviews, and some new sections were added. A Federal Register notice will be issued the week of May 13, 2013, to solicit comments on the Matrix and DSRS sections. Public comments will be due no later than August 16, 2013.

Technical Review group (TRG) Refresher Training

On May 2, 2013, the staff held annual refresher training for 45 members of the agency's Technical Review Group (TRG) program. Approximately 175 staff members from headquarters and the regions participate in TRGs. TRG members and leads are divided into 25 technical areas ranging from Auxiliary Feedwater and Electrical Power Systems to Safety Culture and Cyber Security. Each year, TRG leads work together with their members to combine operating experience information from numerous sources with their own expert knowledge and recommend and/or highlight agency actions in their areas of expertise. TRG recommendations are often incorporated into generic communications or revisions to the regional inspection programs.

Reactor Oversight Process First Quarter 2013 ROP Update

On May 6, 2013, the Reactor Oversight Process (ROP) plant assessment results for the 1st quarter of NRC fiscal year 2013 were posted on the NRC external website.
